

Phlox maculata 'Natascha'

Meadow Phlox

Clump forming perennial with star patterned white and raspberry pink flowers, very mildew resistant foliage. An excellent container plant, often in bloom from June to September. Makes an excellent cut flower and is loved by butterflies

Phlox paniculata 'Robert Poore'

Garden Phlox

This giant among the garden phlox varieties, fragrant, richly red-purple flower clusters, it will catch your attention when it blooms in mid-summer. This is a top-rated phlox for its resistance to powdery mildew, the nemesis of many other paniculata cultivars.

Phlox paniculata 'Delta Snow'

Garden Phlox

A short to medium height summer phlox, bright white flowers contrasted by purple eyes and clean foliage. An introduction from the Mississippi garden of Lynn Libous Bailey via Niche Gardens, of Chapel Hill, NC (www.nichegdn.com). For years this was a "passalong" plant in the deep south. It's now thriving from Texas to New York State. Excellent for hummingbird and butterfly gardens.

Phlox paniculata 'Franz Schubert'

Garden Phlox

A bold, yet airy display with cool lilac flowers contrasted by lavender star shaped centers and dark green foliage. Reliable and unique, and of course a big hit with the butterflies and hummingbird!

Phlox paniculata 'David'

Garden Phlox

Beautiful, large bright white flower clusters, a chance seedling selected by F.M. Mooberry and named for her husband. Blooms from July to September. Deliciously fragrant and very mildew resistant. By far the best white. Excellent for hummingbird and butterfly gardens.

Phlox paniculata 'Katherine'

Garden Phlox

According to the Chicago Botanic Garden trials, "this is one of the very best". Highest mildew resistance, long blooming pale lavender flowers with white eye.

Phlox paniculata 'David's Lavender' PPAF

Garden Phlox

A new color in Summer Phlox, David's Lavender is a selection from seedlings of 'David' that Itsaul plants has introduced. It has all of the disease resistance of 'David' and flowers of deep lavender pink. Lots of flower power in this one!

Phlox paniculata 'Nicky'

Garden Phlox

deep saturated magenta flowers. Outrageous color with a subtle fragrance. A must for the butterfly garden!
